THE GUIDE

The heyday of the department store Christmas catalog may be gone, but our GRAPHICS PRO December issue still delivers the holiday goods by bringing you a fantastic resource to help your business.

December marks our annual edition called The Guide – shorthand for Verified Supplier Guide – a handy reference source to find and contact the exact company you’re looking for to fill your supply and manufacturing needs. Every company that earns the GRAPHICS PRO Verified Supplier badge has been vetted and confirmed by the GRAPHICS PRO team as a legitimate supplier, distributor, or provider of services to the industry.

In this issue, you’ll find alphabetical listings of verified suppliers and manufacturers in the industry, as well as listings broken down into specific industry segments to help you find the right source for the job. Whether you’re looking for adhesive vinyl, information on the latest DTF printers, or just some heat transfer tape to get you by in a pinch, The Guide can help you find the right solution for your needs.

The way we package up all this great information and deliver it to you makes us a lot like Santa Claus, except our accounting department doesn’t accept milk and cookies for premium subscriptions ... yet.

For alphabetized listings, visit page 50.

For an index of categories, visit page 94.

The Guide puts all of these items together in a handy magazine, but you can also take advantage of GRAPHICS PRO’s year-round, updated Verified Supplier Guide online at <https://gpro.link/vsg>.

Be sure to bookmark this page to be your first stop when you need a product or service. No more blind adventures on the internet where you’re at the mercy of a search engine algorithm that can’t tell the difference between a car wrap and a veggie wrap. The Guide offers only verified companies that can put you on the path to success.

And while you’re thinking about catalogs, don’t forget that GRAPHICS PRO also brings you some of the finest product catalogs in our industry. It doesn’t even have to be the holiday season because industry product catalogs are being introduced all year long, and GRAPHICS PRO brings them to you on our website and through our Catalog Connection emails. Visit <https://gpro.link/catalog> for more information.

On the Cutting Edge

Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps builds reputation on service and quality

BY STEFANIE
GALEANO-ZALUTKO

Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps serves up a triple threat: custom-designed vehicle wraps, premium paint protection film, as well as hand-drawn pinstriping and lettering services for customers across the automotive, marine, and motorcycle market segments. Franchise owner Mike Montemurro hangs his hat on uncompromised quality, from employing highly-experienced staff and investing in modern equipment to only offering trusted name brands and materials.

“I won’t [sacrifice] quality or compete on price – it’s a race to zero with some of these shops. While we’re not the cheapest around, I can sleep at night knowing we did the job right,” he says, noting the business carries industry-leading certifications and honors a lifetime warranty on hand-drawn pinstriping and lettering.

Montemurro takes pride in and stands by the shop’s work. In return, loyal, repeat customers are willing to join the 4-6 week waitlist to ensure a positive experience. Over the years, he says a quality reputation earned Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps “a good mix” of enthusiast, dealership, body shop, and commercial patronage across five franchise locations servicing Charlotte, North Carolina, and surrounding areas.

The owner notes the company continues to prosper, growing its customer base despite ongoing economic and supply chain woes. He credits grit, vision, and the willingness to pivot as central to the business’s longevity.

PASSIONATE PROGRESS

Montemurro learned the value of a hard day’s work at a young age, pumping gas and sweeping shop floors by 12 years old. At the ripe age of 21, he sought to turn a passion for the automotive industry into a proper business venture, opening a body shop and putting his burgeoning entrepreneurial skills to the test. Before long, Montemurro discovered a talent for hand-drawn pinstriping and lettering. The dying art not only earned him “street cred” among enthusiast vehicle owners but also solid business relationships with the highest volume dealerships in Long Island, New York.

Years later, Montemurro leaned on his solid reputation to pursue budding business opportunities south of the Mason-Dixon line. He flew to Charlotte, North Carolina, every other weekend for a year before deciding to take the plunge full-time.

When it came time to launch a new shop in 1994, affectionately named Monte’s, he recognized the industry was evolving. During the heyday era of NHRA, hot rods were mostly pinstriped and lettered by hand. While a vast majority of cars were still striped the old-fashioned way in New York, Montemurro noticed decal-type applications starting to rise in popularity among shifting demographics down south – though not without pitfalls.

Early paint protection film was rigid and finicky to handle, guaranteed to yellow or crack, and “a disaster” to remove, he explains. Today, both vehicle wraps and paint protection film are noticeably higher quality, wildly popular among diverse consumers, and relatively economical alternatives to customize for personal enjoyment or mobile marketing efforts.

Armed with a foundational background in bodywork and a reputable skill set in pinstriping and lettering, Montemurro prepared to capitalize on the customization opportunities vehicle wraps and paint protection film presented. In 2003, he franchised Monte's as Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps, investing in premium talent, brands, and graphics equipment.

INVESTING IN THE FUTURE

While all Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps locations still pay homage to Montemurro's hand-drawn roots, the Greensboro and Williamsburg shops also specialize in custom-designed full or partial-wrap installations. These applications run the gamut from trendy color-change options and chrome delete to spot graphics for vehicle enthusiasts and commercial customers alike.

"We always had vinyl on the menu, but in a different way and definitely not to the extent we do today," says Montemurro, noting vehicle wrap revenue increased 500% since expanding the service.

In fact, the original Indian Trail location drives the largest vehicle wrap sales volume across the franchise. What started as Montemurro and a helper in a small shop is now a full-time staff of 14 in a newly-built 8,000 square-foot facility featuring top-of-the-line equipment throughout.

With two Roland TrueVIS VG2-640 printers on site, the design team can access comprehensive color choices, plus increase print and cut accuracy for true unattended production. Montemurro points to the Craform 3D scanner with ExactFlat software as a game changer in turning 3D vehicle scans into flat 2D digital patterns which, he says, provides the team with an advantage many shops do not have.

Featuring simple, ease-to-use operation, Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps' Summa Inc. DC3 Plus produces a range of full-color, contour-cut graphics. The high-quality prints are applied directly to vinyl with no need for lamination due to the printer's thermal resin technology. In addition to contour-cut labels, the Summa DC3 also tiles large-format prints for large projects like fleet vehicle wraps (all in easy-to-handle 91cm wide panels). Plus, its six-station auto ribbon changer allows users to combine process, spot color, and metallic foil printing to yield a top-quality finished product. Montemurro's company also carries a Summa DC5 printer cutter, Summa S2 T160 vinyl cutter, and Summa F1612 flatbed cutter.

For roll-feed cutting, Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps uses a Graphtec FC9000 Series cutting plotter. A popular choice of finishing solution in the automotive industry, this flagship series is Graphtec's most advanced offering to date and features a newly developed feeding system and cutting head to ensure better final cut precision.

With an eye on productivity, Montemurro also employs the use of a Trotec Speedy 360 Laser, the fastest laser engraving and cutting machine on the market. An easy-to-use KALA Laminator further

A Generac water-cooled backup generator sits quietly in the background, waiting to serve as reliable standby power for the entire facility should the southern heat prove too strong for the electrical grid.

RAISING THE BAR

Montemurro says a lower barrier to entry and price slashing undoubtedly opened the door for amateurs to diminish quality in the graphics industry. However, he believes quality name brands and proven expertise always turn out to be a winning differentiator.

The owner touts Avery and KPMF as premium suppliers and "awesome partners," stressing how the former, in particular, offers notable printing variety — from matte and satin to gloss black finishes and more. "The prints, install, and longevity of the product are all great," he says.

In addition to offering premium products, all Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps technicians are Avery and Lowen certified, as well as 3M preferred installers. The certification holds a shop to a higher standard, Montemurro emphasizes. The business also hosts four Avery classes per year on-site, two of which award certifications to attendees. Such education, he says, separates amateurs from professionals.

"If you don't have the skill sets to pass these tests, then you get failed — plain and simple," he says. "When customers see you're an Avery-level installer, they know [they're receiving] quality at the highest degree."

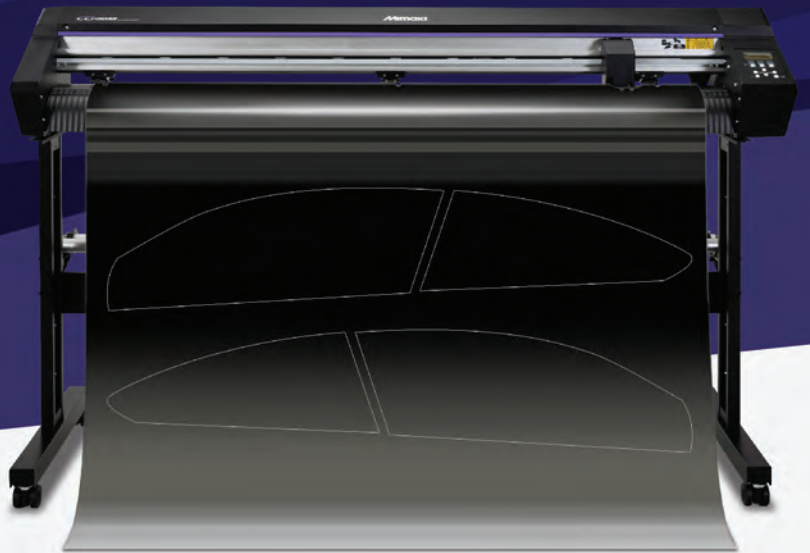

Case in point: experienced technicians know if a product comes into contact with extreme heat or is overstretched in areas, its lifespan could be affected. The biggest impact is the costly damage to the vehicle if the product is not installed correctly, including excessive glue, knife cuts, or chips in the paint.

"One customer decided to have a vehicle wrapped by my competition because it was $150 cheaper," says Montemurro.

“He ended up back at my shop to fix it — costing him time and additional money.”

“When you take the time to do it right, those problems don’t happen,” he continues. “If a customer chose to remove our wrap or paint protection film, for example, there would be no excessive clean-up, knife cuts, or pulled paint. The car would look just as great as when it was purchased — and that really tells a story.”

With a commitment to premium quality and customer service, Montemurro chooses to lean into his natural ingenuity and decades-long experience during challenging times like the current economic downturn, supply chain disruptions, and labor shortages.

Montemurro says there is never a lack of resources, only a lack of resourcefulness. In addition to maintaining a diversified business portfolio, the company ordered in bulk during COVID to secure satisfactory inventory levels and, at times, used shop staff and machinery to produce personal protection equipment.

“My mindset was that I refused to cave,” he says. “Unfortunately, sometimes loyalty had to take a backseat in order to survive. There were times when we had to get product from other suppliers. [Likewise,] if colors weren’t available, we’d mix and print them in-house — match something really close, run a sample, wrap the car, and just keep on rolling.”

PORSCHE PROJECT

The cool cars, custom designs, and expertly-installed vehicle wraps at Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps circulate buzz — enough to catch the attention of a race driver who pulsed Montemurro about collaborating on a special vehicle project.

Email introductions quickly morphed into a formal assessment of the 2021 Porsche 718 GT4 Club Sport MR designed in a high-tech 3D environment. The plan: to bring virtual reality to life and compete the finished product at renowned Porsche events across the country.

“This isn’t a weekend race car at a small, local track. It’s a high-end car made for high-end racing,” says Montemurro, noting how excited the team was about the scope and complexity of the project.

The vehicle was immediately transported from Virginia International Raceway via an enclosed trailer, after which Montemurro's team promptly got to work painstakingly reconstructing the 3D imagery so the artwork could be finalized, cut, and printed for installation using the company's Roland TrueVIS VG2-640 printer.

Atlantic Pinstriping & Vehicle Wraps was not only challenged to recreate the original design in its entirety but also make appropriate alterations to snug-fit the vehicle's curves. Being a track car, the vehicle sustains far more abuse than normal. In a perfect world, paint protection film dons a 10-year warranty; however, the conditions in which the Porsche is slated to compete are anything but ordinary.

As such, lead project technician Michael Montemurro Jr. sought to incorporate maximum protection. He turned to Avery Dennison Chrome, Avery MPI 1105 printed materials, and FTek Dyno Shield for the tough job ahead. First, the vehicle was completely wrapped in paint protection film — edges and all. Next, the vehicle was rewrapped, this time in chrome. Custom-printed graphics were overlaid, then another round of paint protection film was applied to best protect all carbon fiber elements and graphics.

Junior admits the rear quarter panels were particularly difficult to wrap, given their unique shape and intricacy. Leaning on his training, he expertly hid exposed seams to create a long-lasting “optically-pleasing” install.

With Junior mainly working solo on the installation, the project took 7-10 days.

The team agreed that the vehicle itself, in addition to the product used to dress it and the finite details required to complete the project, made the tall task all the more special. Overcoming the challenges of chrome was a particularly rewarding aspect of the installation for Junior.

“Seeing it come together as a true race car was very cool. It's a real showpiece, and the customer was thrilled with it,” he says.

Looking ahead, Montemurro is laser-focused on maintaining his core business — but hopeful the unique opportunity to collaborate in the race scene will stimulate similar project discussions. GP

It’s when you think that he’s forgot, He’ll conjure your undoing,
Bolted doors and widows barred, Guard dogs prowling in the yard, Won’t protect you in your bed, Nothing will, from Pumpkinhead!”*

— Ed Justin reciting the Pumpkinhead poem

Pumpkinhead, also called the Demon of Vengeance, is a fictional character featured in the 1988 horror film “Pumpkinhead.” The original creature was designed by Stan Winston. In the films, the demon can be conjured by a summoner to exact revenge on anyone who wronged them by viciously killing them. The targets are “marked” for death and no matter where they go, Pumpkinhead will always find them. The only way to kill the creature is to kill its conjurer. The more summoners there are in the ritual, the bigger and stronger Pumpkinhead is. If anyone stops Pumpkinhead, their soul is cursed with damnation. The only way to cleanse it is for Pumpkinhead to kill them. In the original film, Pumpkinhead was first conjured by a man named Edward Harley, who desired vengeance after his son

Yikes ... horror flicks are complicated. All the questions cannot be answered in a single movie. So, this month's column is about the sequel. Bum, bum, bum! "Pumpkinhead II." Incidentally, there are two additional movies, comic books and video games, too. More of a franchise than we would have ever imagined. This spooky holiday of All Hallows conjures up imagination and horror alike. Once again, it would seem criminal in October to not indulge in a design tied to this creepy time of year.

Since this was a showpiece, we were afforded 10+ colors. We always love that. We picked bright primary and secondary colors. Vivid complimentary colors included red, gold, orange, blue, green, and purple. Straight forward and easy color theory.

For our original and this Pumpkinhead, we started with an idea in pencil to sell it to the client. We wrapped up Jason from “Friday the 13th,” Michael Meyers, a little Freddy Kruger, and the headless horseman all into one. Rather than a knife, he yields a squeegee with red ink dripping from the “blade.” This would print on black, making it perfect for a dark spooky scene. The initial rough sketch was scanned into Photoshop at 300 DPI. We darkened our pencil using the Levels palette to look like a comic strip. We then filled in basic colorization. We painted over those colors to make editing easier and to isolate areas for seps. Since Pumpkinhead was the focus, we pushed the background back. Violet and royal blue made for a perfect night sky. We incorporated the famous Vegas sign because, well, that’s where we were printing this.

We added some shadowy recesses and dark areas. The dark shadows would be shown through. Black was the core of shadow. We rendered in some reflective light to move the color around as well. Since violet was a direct compliment to orange on the color wheel, it made for a dramatic shadow and impact.

We beat up the iconic Vegas sign to creep it out. Modifying the white base under the sign pushed some of the colors back which added to the dilapidation and gave us multiple tones with each color. Dark leafless branches made for interesting edges and added that creep factor. These effects were simply knocked out of the imagery as negative space.

Once the color was developed, we carefully considered our white printer or base plate’s opacities. The black fabric helped us achieve secondary and shadow colors. We managed a number of tones with each

What's the Secret to Getting Your Slice of the $230 Billion Digital Print Pie?

It's no secret – here's how.

Digital printing is here to stay and in a big way. Multi-product, high-mix, low-volume production, the digital print-on-demand market is exploding with an expected CAGR of 26.1% from 2022 to 2030 and market forecasted growth of 65% over the next 10 years to reach $230 billion by 2029.

COVID-19 fueled a surge in e-commerce sales, which saw a staggering 10 years' worth of growth during a 90-day period in 2020 and greatly increased demand for digital print with no end in sight — and printers are answering the call.

Businesses with digital printing capabilities today can, for example, have 100 websites selling 1,000 designs and infinite custom options but not print a single item until payment.

- Direct-to-garment is one of the fastest growing segments in print today
- Direct-to-film is taking the market by storm with lower-cost options
- Wide-format is expected to swell to $11.4 billion by 2026, CAGR 5.4%

Risk can be low and ROI high in the billion-dollar digital print market. Yet, one company recently invested $250,000 into digital printing equipment and went out of business in less than two years — while another invested the same amount, and then an additional $4 million in less than four years because business is booming. The difference? The latter enlisted the experience and expertise of Millcraft.

MORE THAN JUST PAPER

As the leading Midwest-based wholesale distributor of paper, from luxury and brand packaging to boxes, banners, and sign material, Millcraft has more than 100 years of experience in the print market. We proudly represent hundreds of manufacturers and have specialists in nearly every aspect of the supply chain.

Millcraft offers solutions to help businesses succeed with customized direct-to-garment, direct-to-film, and wide-format printer packages. Featuring industry-leading printing equipment, plotters, and operational software as an authorized Mimaki[®] dealer, Millcraft's certified technicians on staff are available to install, answer questions, troubleshoot, and support the growth of your business.

Millcraft Wide-Format Specialist Mike Barrett, whose expertise includes more than 25 years in wide-format printing, says, "We have real-world production experience and the knowledge to teach you how to be successful. Along with our capabilities and industry expertise, we can supply the equipment and materials, and assist with installation, training, and support. Our experts help customers with layout, workflow, and determining ROI."

WIRE-TO-WIRE WITH MILLCRAFT

Millcraft Garment and Textile Print Specialist Eric Deem says, "Investing in digital printing equipment requires expertise, and training is necessary. We don't simply ship customers a box and leave them on their own. Millcraft guides the entire process, from wire-to-wire. We can help you get up and running more quickly, and with precision."

Digital printing equipment options are vast, details per company size and needs are complex, but getting started with Millcraft is as simple as a phone conversation. For a site survey and shop floor layout, optimal workflow, and expertly calculated ROI budgeted down to your ink, materials, and square foot costs alongside your equipment – speak with a Millcraft expert directly.

"When you're looking to open up a new market and take your business to another level," Barrett says, "digital print isn't going anywhere and the segment will only continue to grow."

MAKING MOVES DURING INFLATION

FOLLOW THESE STEPS TO PREPARE YOUR BUSINESS FOR INFLATION

Inflation, as we know, has been on the rise over the past three to five years, and depending on where your company is, you can feel it more than others. With our company being in New York, we get to see it move much quicker at times due to consistent minimum wage hikes, mandated paid personal time off, massive comp rate hikes, state fees, and more. So, over the years we have had to learn to be creative with not only our finances, but buying products/supplies, investing, and how we go about increasing pricing. Why am I informing you of all of this? Because it is something you should be working on right now!

FINANCES

You always want to look at your finances first. Make sure you have your hardcore numbers and that they are up to date, along with figuring out your cash flow to keep you ahead of any curve. Once I know our numbers are all in for the period, I can start looking at our profit and loss statement and examine each line item to see where we had abnormal spending and why. Then I can create a list of where we can save going into the next year, but I also keep an eye out if we need to increase the budget for spending on that line item as well. You always want to project worst-case numbers and not the best-case. If you work with the worst-case numbers, you are always giving yourself a buffer, and if you have to be tight on certain spending, you can do as needed. As I go through each line, I am also looking for ways to improve our spending, who it is with, etc. Once I have made it through the P&L, I have a total and know what my worst-case savings are if I hit the same sales as this year. I never count on growth — even though we grow by a minimum of 15% to 20% and are close to 50% this year. Growth is never a guarantee, so never bank on it!

PAYROLL

The next thing I work on is payroll numbers. I am looking at the number of staff, overtime, turnover rate, and cost of hiring new staff. When studying these numbers over the years, we have come up with ways to help improve our production and build morale while being cost-effective. One example is to create a four-day workweek (as much as possible). This gets you 10 hours' worth of work daily instead of eight hours, and if you do need the employee for overtime, they still get the weekend, and if not, they get a three-day weekend — which they all love to have and is a win/win for both. Once I have gone through each line of how we can improve by lowering our overtime, investing in hiring, and getting our hardline numbers for where we can save, I will project worst-case pay increases with taxes and benefit increases to get a whole number to work with.

Another way to help offset your costs for payroll each year is to determine what time of the year you give your increases. We started giving all reviews and pay increases at the same time a couple of years ago, which not only makes it easy on management but helps offset the initial costs. It is a two-prong plan. Once we know our pricing increases, etc. (which we are done with in October), we implement them on the first of November. This gives us a five-month buffer to build more revenue before we do reviews at the end of March. And their pay increases start on the first pay period of April, which gives our

New York State's Minimum Wage

The statewide $15 minimum wage was enacted as part of the 2016-17 State Budget. The plan takes the needs of workers and businesses alike into account.

As of December 31, 2016, the first in a series of wage increases went into effect. Rates differ based on region and industry because the increases are calibrated to provide businesses ample time to adjust.

General Minimum Wage Rate Schedule
Location	12/31/16	12/31/17	12/31/18	12/31/19	12/31/20	12/31/21	12/31/22*
NYC - Big Employers (of 11 or more)	$11.00	$13.00	$15.00
NYC - Small Employers (10 or less)	$10.50	$12.00	$13.50	$15.00
Long Island & Westchester	$10.00	$11.00	$12.00	$13.00	$14.00	$15.00
Remainder of New York State Workers	$9.70	$10.40	$11.10	$11.80	$12.50	$13.20	$14.20*

Future increases will be based on an indexed schedule to be set by the Director of the Division of the Budget in consultation with the Department of Labor following an annual review of the impact.*

company one less quarter to pay increases in that physical year. This is another layer of protection for all and allows us to give the best possible pay increases to each staff member. The great thing about this is that the staff always knows when to expect their reviews along with any potential pay increases. And it really takes a lot of stress off of management and allows us to focus on giving a much better and in-depth review of each employee.

BUYING

I have talked about buying in other articles, and I want to touch on this again. It is important that you pay attention to your buying as much as possible. It is easy to overbuy daily or off and on throughout the year, which can crush you financially. Look at your buying trends for weekly supplies and products you buy daily. See if you can build bulk-buy deals. How?

Look at items you buy weekly, like white screen-printing ink.

Ask your vendor about how many you are buying. Say it is 60 gallons of white per year, but when you buy them, you are only buying one or two at a time. If you do this, you are naturally paying more in shipping alone, so it would save you at least $30 to double up your spending as many companies give shipping discounts. If you work a deal with your vendor on buying a certain minimum of that color ink each time, some will give you an additional 5% to 10% discount, which creates greater savings for your company and makes your money work for you. You want to practice this on as many supply items as you can. The more you can make those investments, the more you increase your profit margins and protect yourself from inflation. Around three years ago, our normal gallon of white was no more than $80 each and now is close to $130 each. We keep several in stock at a time, so it delays the price increase hitting us before others — it still reaches us eventually, but at least we can curb how fast we see it.

Another main thing we look at is investing money into new equipment and processes to help drive costs down.

INVESTING

Another thing we look at is investing money into new equipment and processes to help drive costs down. The old thought of spending money to make money is factual. About two months ago, my wife and I were talking about investing in another automated screen printing press to make the workload easier in that department. Later that day, I received a video on a direct-to-film printer that caught my eye, and I was hooked on learning more. I could not stop.

We spent about a month researching it and running basic numbers and went to a vendor in Florida after having an in-depth Zoom meeting with them to see the printer in action. Once we saw the process, we ordered the largest machine while we were there so we could grow into it. For $250 more per month, we were better off having room for growth with the machine — but we did not stop there. We are also investing in at least five more MacBook Pro laptops for our team, two 5-in-1 mug presses, and two drinkware presses that can handle multiple cup shapes. Our total investment is close to $65,000, which is about what one automated press will cost us for one person to run.

This investment in the direct-to-film printer will actually help us shift work away from our screen printers, sublimation process, and apparel vinyl process, which lowers prep time for each and naturally helps to lower the error rate and is much easier to work with. The newer computers will move faster for the people who are on them all day, helping them to speed up naturally. And their computers will shift to others who are not on them as much, giving them access and not having to wait to use a computer. As of right now, we are using a convection oven for mugs, which has been great, but the prep time can slow you down. So, we found the mug presses that can produce five mugs in about four minutes, while the oven alone takes 12 minutes (plus putting the mug wraps on). This will not only take up less space but get more mugs done per hour. The other two presses will allow us to handle multiple different-sized water bottles and tumblers faster, as well as speed up production and lower overtime and power usage. We are taking out a five-year loan, but this entire investment will help over 50% of our team be more productive at the same time, make their jobs easier. Plus, it will pay for itself in just one year, which is a huge win for all of us at work.

PRICING INCREASES

Once you get through all of your rough numbers and projections to figure out what your increased costs can be, it is time to look at pricing increases. You want to research what others are selling certain processes for, but do not let it define your pricing 100%. Use it as a guide only. Say your increased cost of doing business next year is $20,000. Divide that by 12 months and round up, which gives you $1,700 more per month you need to account for. Figure those numbers into the number of pieces per process you sold to get a rough average per process to make the net mark-up fare across the board for all processes and all customers. This is a simplified way of doing it for smaller companies. Always treat your company like a game of chess and think three to six moves ahead, and never be afraid to pivot. GP

Hiring Differentlyabled Employees

Understanding the correct terminology and creating a path to success

BY KRISTINE SHREVE

As Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) programs become popular at more companies and DEI becomes a sort of buzzword in human resources, there has been an uptick in articles and videos about companies that are making a concentrated effort to employ people that many would call “disabled” or “differentlyabled.” The employees may be dealing with physical or emotional challenges; they could be deaf or blind, non-verbal, or dealing with autism, ADHD, or other mental or physical issues. Some disabled workers may also be dealing with invisible disabilities like chronic fatigue syndrome, depression, or anxiety. The companies that have committed to this type of hiring have worked to create welcoming and supportive environments for people with disabilities and have found their workplaces, spectrum of employee options, and bottom lines are better for doing so. Enlarging the pool of people a company can employ and considers employable makes good sense these days, but there are some things to consider when figuring out how to make people with physical or mental challenges comfortable and productive.

IT'S ALL IN A NAME: TERMINOLOGY

One of the first things that may need revision is how people who have traditionally been referred to as “physically or mentally challenged,” “differentlyabled,” or “handicapped” are discussed. Let’s take the term “differentlyabled,” for instance. According to research, the phrase was created by the U.S. Democratic National Committee as an alternative to handicapped. The motivation behind the creation of the phrase was to eliminate the stigma that the word handicapped sometimes imposed. What it did instead, in the opinion of some, was to disguise the difficulties experienced by people who have serious physical or mental handicaps. Well-meaning in practice but not so great in execution.

Still, most people want to refer to others respectfully and correctly, so when you’re discussing people with physical or mental challenges (which, by the way, also isn’t a great way to put things), what do you say instead? The first way to handle that question is simply to ask the person who is disabled what terms they prefer. Many may prefer “disabled” or “person with disabilities.” Also, try to refer to the person first and the disability second. This sort of approach would lead you to say, “person who uses a wheelchair” vs. “wheelchair user.” The first phrase emphasizes the person, while the second focuses on that person’s mode of movement.

Another thing to be aware of is occasions when you may be referencing the disability of a person or group when it isn’t warranted. Talking about accessibility when you’re planning a meeting or conference makes sense, as you want to make it easy for everyone to attend. Saying the dyslexics will need an audio version of the instructions for this machine does not make sense. Instead, say, “We need to make sure these instructions are accessible for all employees,” which is much more inclusive and doesn’t single out any one group.

Also, avoid any discussion or portrayal on a website, company video, etc. that describes employees with disabilities as inspirational or courageous. Some people call this “inspiration porn.” This is a form of propaganda that implies that living with a disability is so terrible that simply getting through the day/living a normal life is inspirational. Keep in mind that disabled people are simply people — albeit ones with a disability — and are not living in the world to provide a “there but for the grace of God go I” moment or a daily hit of inspiration for the rest of us. Those with disabilities simply want to be accepted as themselves, not as living motivational posters.

YOU CAN ACCOMMODATE PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES — ASK THEM HOW

The main goal of any DEI program should be to make everyone feel a part of the workplace and comfortable within that space. The best way to do that is to ask people what they need to do their work in the most efficient way possible and how you can help them perform at their highest level. Don’t assume you know how people want to be referred to, and don’t assume you know what they need. Someone who is disabled has had far more experience in navigating the world and living with their disability than you have. Instead of assuming they need special treatment or implementing expensive accommodations that the employee may not want or need, simply ask them what will work for them and then implement those things.

Also, make sure that accommodations for those with disabilities aren’t promoted excessively, as though your company has gone to great lengths or done a great thing. Providing a translator for Jane in Shipping, who’s deaf and speaks only using American Sign Language, should be considered the same as getting a chair with lumbar support for John in Accounting, who has a bad back. Accommodations should be treated simply as ways to help each employee provide their peak performance and be comfortable and happy while they’re doing it. Companies that try to capitalize on their willingness to accommodate, or who use disabled employees as “inspiration porn” are using those employees as symbols and doing a disservice both to the employee and to the company.

IT’S NOT JUST FASHIONABLE; IT’S GOOD BUSINESS

Another current trend among companies is the rise of Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) programs. While these programs have a lot of benefits, they are often much more oriented toward race or gender than they are toward disability. If your company has a DEI program, make sure that it deals with disability as much as other forms of diversity. Whether your company has a DEI program or not, it should be communicated from the top down that all people, including those with disabilities, are valued and welcomed in your organization. Make sure this is communicated on your website, on your social media profiles, and particularly in any job openings that are posted. You should have a plan to hire and retain employees with disabilities and make an effort to find vendors who do the same. Make sure your commitment to supporting disabled workers is one of practice as well as theory. This initiative needs to be more than some politically correct or fashionable statement made to seem in sync with the times.

Employing people with disabilities can be a huge benefit for any company for several reasons. First, studies have shown that people with disabilities have a higher retention rate and tend to be very reliable. You may also find that disabled people are looking for long-term job stability and are more likely to want to stay with a company. Another benefit of having disabled people in your employee pool is the fact that there are tax credits and other incentives for hiring employees of this type. While those credits or incentives should not be a primary motivating factor for implementing a hiring program, they can be an added bonus.

Your company may also derive social benefits from having a diverse workforce that includes the disabled. People with disabilities may have excellent problem-solving abilities as they've been dealing with challenges and figuring out how to solve them in their own lives. They may also have extraordinary tenacity for the same reason. Having disabled people on staff may also open you to new markets, as people with specific disabilities can give you insight into market segments you otherwise would not have been able to penetrate. Employing a diverse group of people also allows your workforce to learn how to practice compassion and collaborate, which may result in a kinder workplace and more productivity overall.

A company needs the willingness to try, to think outside the box about what a good employee looks like or how they work, and the ability to listen.

Finally, don't forget that not all disabilities can be seen or easily perceived. People with depression, anxiety, and other mental illnesses are also considered disabled, as are people with chronic fatigue syndrome, rheumatoid arthritis, and other physical issues which may have no outward symptoms. People with hidden disabilities may be reluctant to disclose any issues they may deal with because of cultural conditioning or stigma. In those cases, having an open and accepting corporate culture may ease the way. If your company aspires to employ the widest range of people possible, the best way to accomplish that goal is to be ready to accommodate the needs of all employees and to be open and receptive when they ask for accommodation. Don't make assumptions about what an employee needs, and don't make assumptions about their level of performance or their capabilities.

In the end, the thing a company needs most if it is going to successfully employ disabled people is the willingness to try, to think outside the box about what a good employee looks like or how they work, and the ability to listen. The average employee wants to be successful in their job and to produce and add to the bottom line of the company that employs them. Disabled employees are no different. While they may need help and accommodation to accomplish those goals, the benefits are well worth any necessary cost and time. GP

YEAR-END REVIEW

TRAITS OF SUCCESSFUL PEOPLE WE CAN ALL MASTER

As we come to the close of another year, it is gratifying and helpful for future success to carve out some time to reflect, look back, and honestly answer questions about the previous 12 months. This process is not an exercise in punishment or to point out the failures, but instead a way to evaluate the details so we can gain the most valuable feedback possible. The best way to improve your business is to measure it from a starting line and see what happened and why. Don't measure from where you are to a finish line you may or may not have reached. What didn't happen is complex and arbitrary, while what did happen is measurable and concrete.

Also, there are a lot of great questions out there that you can find to analyze your company's past year's success. Questions that help you look at specific data around your customers, sales, and expenses. How is your marketing doing, and what successes have you had and why? But most people need to remember to ask themselves the mindset questions. The questions that help you understand your relationship with your customers and how you are progressing as a business owner. Mindset is so under-recognized when improving a business that most people think it is unimportant. But what I have learned after working with small business owners is your mindset and the skills that come with that are crucial for success.

Let me share some questions and thoughts to ponder in some downtime between the end of 2022 and the beginning of 2023.

How are my (or my company's) skills measuring up to other successful people (or companies)?

To grow, we sometimes have to look to others who have done something similar or study those that have mastered success. I have noticed that successful people (or companies) have similar traits we can all master. So how did you do on improving these skills:

- Intrinsic Motivation - These are areas like your curiosity, passion, purpose, autonomy, and mastery. These skills can be built through practice while at the same time taking small risks to gain self-confidence.

- Self-Awareness - This is a skill that involves both empathy and self-reflection. You must look internally and understand how those around you receive you. It's about being part of more than just you and your company's needs but also lifting others and supporting your community. It's also about asking for help and support while implementing and engaging in the information you receive from that help and support.

- Creativity/Innovation - Successful entrepreneurs and those with more than just a J.O.B. (just over broke) spend time being innovative and creative. This creativity can be problem-solving, creating new things, or even the creativity of your craft. But the truth is that the process is messy. You must be willing to try something hard to be creative and innovative — yet know when the “sand” is getting too far outside the sandbox.

- Flow/Focus - We live in a world of distractions, shiny objects, and notifications that steal our attention. Successful people don't accept interruptions and distractions as “just the way it is.” What have you done to get better organized and create those sacred times to get in the flow and be focused on a difficult challenge? How do you get to this state of losing track of time because you are so in the zone?

How much time am I spending working on vs. in my business?

There is a difference between the two. “Working in” are the daily fires, customer emails, ordering products, and even creating goods and services. These are very important to handle, but they can become overwhelming and ineffective if you never spend time working on your business. “Working on” includes projects such as evaluating your numbers, setting goals, developing a plan, implementing policies, and creating workflows and standard operating procedures. When you work on your business, the “in” items are more manageable, effective, and exciting. I encouraged you to schedule at least 15% of your time to work on your business. Look back at the last 12 months and see what you need to change for the next 12 months to get that minimum of 15%.

How is my business doing in regards to the three things customers actually care about?

The minimum requirement of a company is to do good work and deliver on time. You will only be in business for a short time if you do not meet those criteria. But you don't want to be in business. You want to thrive and have something that I love doing each day. Not just another job where you work 168 hours a week and get paid less than minimum wage. So, the question is, how are you delivering on these three things - speed, clarity, and empathy?

- Speed - You must believe that speed is important and think you can be exceptionally fast because speed is a choice. In today's modern world, speed is the name of the game. This means the speed of returning emails, replying to social media posts, getting the work done, and more. Where can you improve your speed?

- Clarity - If things are not clear for your ideal customers, they will move on to the next name on the list. Many of us are looking for complaints about our business, but are we on the lookout for clarity warnings? When your customer says, “I'm confused,” is it because you need clarity too?

- Empathy - This comes naturally to some and not so naturally to others. It is something we must work on, and it doesn't make me a bad person. We care about people but don't naturally put ourselves in others' shoes. It is essential to be kind no matter what the person on the other side is doing. Focus on the feelings, not the facts.

What is most important about your missions, vision, or values?

Do you have clarity on your reason for being in business? And regardless of how strongly you feel the reason is to make money to support your family, I can guarantee that is not your "why." Because if I ask you "why" five more times after you tell me you started your business to make money, you will find that the reality is different. If you wanted to make money, you would get a job and clock in and out. That is a much easier way to make money. You want to make money in this business due to something much more profound. So, if you do not have this clarity, what will you do to change that? If you feel you have clarity of your reasons, do your ideal customers and prospects know what that mission means for them?

I challenge you to take some time and reflect on these questions. Allow yourself to go deep and see what comes up for you. I know your business will be better off, as will you as a person. Mindset connects so closely to success that it boggles my mind how most people ignore it. It feels awkward and hard to go deep like this, but the value is enormous. Success is very simple but not easy — so start with some true reflection. GP

COMPANY PROFILE: Running a print shop is about more than just being able to produce a few fliers for your clients. Investing in the latest technology will help you keep up with your clients' needs so you can print commercial, color, and large-format items with high quality, low costs, and fast turnaround times. If you've discovered your current printing equipment isn't enough to meet the demands of your growing business, consider the benefits of financing or leasing to expand your operations.

COMPANY PROFILE: Welcome to Citadel Brands LLC, a South Carolina-based distributor of the AWDIs (All We Do Is) Brands of Just Cool and Just Hoods. Our team of dedicated professionals have over 50 years of experience in the Promotional Apparel Industry. Our Just Cool products are crafted from lightweight, smooth Neoteric fabric, creating a great platform for screen printing, sublimation, or heat transfers. Our Just Hoods line consists of fleece products that are manufactured using ultra-soft ring-spun cotton/polyester fabric with a cotton-rich face providing unbelievable comfort and the ultimate printing platform. Sell our products with confidence, as all of our manufacturing facilities and mill partners are WRAP (Worldwide Responsible Accredited Production) Certified. As we all have navigated through these unprecedented times, our team wants our customers to know that we are here and stronger than ever.
